Let's Start!

What makes you a good candidate for the job?

Learning Outcome

Accurately use important information about people's jobs and places of work in communicative situations.

Ask your partner:

- How do you usually feel when you're in a job interview?
- What things can you tell an employer about yourself to make him or her want to give you a job or promotion?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about job and work.
- I can talk about behavior and personality.
- I can talk about future action, plans and intentions.

Let's Explore!

When is the letter from the PR firm going to arrive?

* "PR" stands for Public Relations.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Peter: Hey Sally. I'm returning your call!

Sally: Peter! How are you?

Peter: I'm okay. I'm usually a very patient person, but waiting for a response from the PR firm is stressful.

Sally: Wow. You're always so easy-going and calm. This PR job must mean a lot to you.

Peter: I'm going apartment hunting in Boston this weekend.

Sally: You're going to take an apartment without a job? There's the old optimistic Peter!

Peter: I'll have a good look at places. I won't take a place until I'm hired.

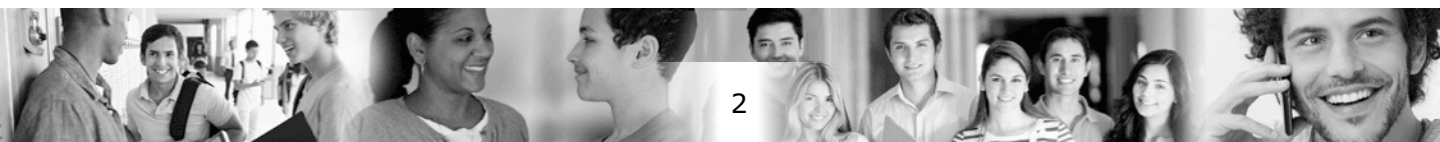

Sally: You'll have an idea of what's available. You're showing your practical side.

Peter: I'm sending out a second set of resumes next week. I'm going to be starting at the bottom. I'd be an asset in social media or public relations.

Sally: You'll find a place and do well. You're personable and talkative. That's good for PR right?

Peter: Yeah. I'll just have to wait. I'm going to find a place to work. I just want it to be right for me.

Sally: Something is coming for you. I feel it. Bye!

Learning Points

Talking on the Phone

To keep a conversation going in English, it's important to show that you are interested in talking to your friend. When you couldn't answer the phone you need to return your call as soon as possible this shows that you are interested in talking to someone.

For example:

Hey Sally, I'm returning your call!

Peter! How are you?

On the other hand, you can also show interest by asking questions or by responding to or commenting on what the person you are talking to says.

Waiting for a response from the PR firm is stressful.	Wow. You're always so easy-going and calm.
That's good for PR right?	Yeah. I'll just have to wait.
I'm going apartment hunting in Boston this weekend.	There's the old optimistic Peter!

Learning Points

The Future with Will, Be Going To, and the Present Continuous

Talking about the future can be very confusing ...

You use will when you decide to do something at the moment of speaking or when you are not sure about the future. You also use will to make promises, to offer or refuse, and to predict the future.

For example:

Come on, I'll help you with those bags.

Maybe I'll go to Hawaii this year.

Ah! I see from your hand that you will live to be 100 years old!

You use going to to when you have decided to do something in a general way. You intend to do it, but you have not finalized your plans or booked anything yet.

For example:

I'm going to take some more courses next year.

We're going to go to Europe in the spring.

You also use going to to make a prediction when there is some evidence.

For example:

Look at those black clouds! It's going to rain soon.

It's already 6:00? I'm going to be late!

You use the Present Continuous to talk about future events and that are planned. Arrangements or appointments have been made.

For example:

I'm seeing the dentist tomorrow at 4:00 p.m.

We're having a party next Saturday and want you to come.

You use the Present Simple tense for the future with schedules and timetables. This is for things and not for people.

For example:

My plane leaves at 7:00 p.m. next Wednesday.

Examples:

- You're going to take an apartment without a job?
- I'm going to be starting at the bottom.
- You'll have an idea of what's available.
- I'll just have to wait.
- The fall semester starts in three weeks.
- I'm sending out a second set of resumes next week.
